Extract of the report of the food situation in the Bangalore District for the period ending Monday, 7th April'19

With regard to Food Inspectors, I put ~~in~~ it forth as a suggestion now that Amildars have been relieved of their Magisterial powers and have more time for moving about, if it would not be better to give them an allowance, say of Rs. 50/- for food work, instead of appointing Food Inspectors on -- Rs. 100/- plus 20.

In the first place, it will be very difficult to get satisfactory men to fill up these appointments, and even when it is done, I doubt if they will be able to do much without the help of the Amildar, who is the only person that the ryot takes any notice of. If Amildars are given an allowance for this, I believe we should get some really good work out of them.

My suggestion probably applies more to this District than other Districts, as, for all I know, more commandeering is carried on here than in other places, and it is the prestige of the Amildar that is required for this.

It is no use having a Food Inspector on Rs. 100/- plus 20 if he is dependent on the Amildar. Make it worth the Amildar's while, and I believe he will show good results.
